Toboggan Suits

FOR
Ladies, Gentlemen and Children.

Unique and beautiful designs; styles exclusively our own and prices as low as possible. Orders executed at short notice; Special Rates to Clubs.

James McCreery & Co.,

Broadway and 11th St.

No danger of "Baby's" being overlooked; the dealers in toys and fancy goods are taking care of him at a furious rate these last days of Christmas shopping. But how about the "old man" and the "lady boys"?

Let us suggest:
$15 or $20 will buy a fine overcoat for a man, if selected from our reduced lots.

$5 will buy an overcoat or knickerbocker suit for a small boy—nice one, if you'll look among the "bargains" in either of our stores.

A Canadian toboggan suit for man or boy would be a brilliant gift; $8 to $12. Toboggan overcoats for children, $5.

House coats, wrappers, flannel robes and gowns, all "so English" and so comfortable as well as bright and pretty—prices, $7 to $20. Dressing-gowns for boys, too.

We doubt if a "haberdasher" in town has such a stock of holiday canes and umbrellas as we have in either store; many unique designs in handles and much below usual prices.

SOLD HIS BODY FOR DRINK.

Strange Story of the Headless Body of a Whiffles Old Man.

While the freight men at Victor Station, a little south of Palmyra, N. Y., were handling a barrel yesterday morning addressed to "John G. Hawks, No. 305 West Twenty-ninth street, New York," the head was knocked off. The men were amazed to find the headless body of an old man.

The body was headless. It was the body of an old, shuffling fellow, Harrison Stamper, who was a drunkard and a public charge for years. The old boy had sold his body to a young doctor of the neighborhood, James M. Marshall, for two gallons of whiskey. Marshall cut the head off and shipped the dejected body to the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York.

A World reporter called at 305 West Twenty-ninth street to-day. No Mr. Hawks lived there, and no doctor of medical student lodged in the house. The woman who had charge of the house said that on last Monday a man about thirty years old engaged a room, saying that he did not intend to occupy it often, but wished to have a place to keep his instruments and where things could be sent. He was a well-dressed, suave, young man. He said that he was a nurse. He gave no name or address. He has not been heard from since.

"As he left no deposit, the room is not really his," said the landlady. "and if any of his old boxes with corpses in them come here they can wait on the sidewalk. That is a nice sort of Christmas box."

At the College of Physicians and Surgeons no box of the kind had been received. The nearest approach to the name on the list of students was James Marshall Hawks, who knew nothing about the body.

"One of my students would hardly do such a thing," said the clerk, E. T. Brag, "since he knows the penalty for such an act. Our bodies are received from the Commissioners of Charity and Correction, and although we do not get enough, such a course as that would not be followed."

If James G. Hawks really is waiting for the old man without a head, who shuffled off his mortal coil with the merry aid of two gallons of whiskey, he probably will call for his Christmas box at the station, as 305 West Twenty-ninth street knows him not.

Sellina Dolore in Court.

Re-Judge A. J. Dittenhofer, accompanied by Miss Sellina Dolore, the actress, stepped into the Court of Common Pleas to-day to defend the suit brought against Miss Dolore and Henry K. Abbey by William Yardley, who claims to be part author of the play called "The Fashion." In which Miss Dolore is to appear as Wallace's.

Yardley seeks an injunction to restrain the production of the play unless his name is mentioned as co-author with Sellina Dolore. Neither side was quite prepared to proceed, and an adjournment until next Tuesday was granted. Miss Dolore was disappointed because the matter was not settled.

YOUNG M'NEALLY NABBED.

He was Found and Arrested at Halifax Early this Morning.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD.)
HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 23.—Frank C. McNeally, the Saco Bank robber, is arrested. He had just finished his breakfast and had returned to his room in the Hotel Halifax when Detective Power, of this city, rushed in and had him under arrest in a twinkling. The arrest was precipitated by the arrival of the Boston Globe correspondent here last night.

As soon as the Globe reporter arrived he was the object of strictest surveillance, and the English detectives, who have been watching McNeally for several days, fearing that the bird might have flown or be captured by an American, at once pounced upon him and ran him to the City Marshal's office in double-quick time.

McNeally shook like an aspen as he went from the hotel. There is no doubt about McNeally's identity. The American Consul at Halifax has informed Mr. McNeally, the Globe's correspondent, that he is entitled to the $7,000 reward. Young Frank McNeally was a clerk in the Saco National Bank at Saco, Me. He was a member of one of the churches in the city, and held in such high esteem by the bank officials that he was intrusted with the freedom of the institution when the cashier was away.

Several months ago the cashier of the bank on entering one afternoon was surprised and chagrined to find all the available cash and numerous bonds, all amounting in value to not less than $270,000, missing. McNeally was nowhere to be found.

He was traced to Halifax and lately negotiations have been pending between him and the bank officials looking to a return of the bonds. McNeally's brother acting as the go-between.

Bound to Win Her for His Bride.
Morris Greenberger, nineteen years old, who is employed in his brother's hat factory, at 428 Broome street, applied at the Tombs Police Court yesterday for a warrant of arrest against his brother, who, he said, refused to allow him to pay attention to the object of his affections.

Justice Killebrew noticed something strange about him and advised him to go home. Last evening Miss Roy Reuben, a pretty girl nineteen years old, who is also employed in Greenberger's hat factory, went to the residence of her father, a man named Gallagher, who was on duty in Broome street, to arrest Morris for continually annoying her and for declaring his love for her.

Greenberger was arrested at the Tombs Court this morning. Miss Reuben told Justice Killebrew that she could not explain why he bothered her so. The defendant when asked why he annoyed her complained: "I love this girl. I will win her yet. I swear she shall be my bride." Greenberger was committed for examination as to his mental condition.

Gauger Cole at War Again.

The order relieving Assistant Gauger Cole from duty has been revoked by Surveyor Beattie. As a result of the investigation made by the department pending his relief, a seizure of forty-nine barrels of whiskey in bonded warehouse was made yesterday, on the ground that one barrel of it had been tampered with after it left the hands of the gauger.

A Holiday for the Exchanges.

The Exchanges that will close all day to-morrow are the Stock, Produce, Cotton and Coffee. The stock department of the Consolidated Exchange will also close all day, but the petroleum branch will keep open until noon, as it is usual on Saturday. The Maritime and Metal Exchanges are the only ones which will be open for the transaction of business all day long.

ANXIOUS EYES SCAN THE SEAS.

No News Yet Received from the Derelict Timber Raft.

Shipping men, merchants and people who have friends on the ocean examined The World carefully this morning to learn if the great raft of timber, which was abandoned by the steamship Miranda some two hundred miles southeast of New York last Saturday, was still adrift.

News is anxiously awaited from the big tugboat C. W. Morse, which set out from the foot of Sixth street, Williamsburg, yesterday in search of it.

The raft is built of immense logs of spruce, the centre or anchor log being a tree seventy-five feet long, with a thickness of three and one-half feet at the base and ten inches at the top, and there is not a piece of timber in the raft less than twenty-five feet long.

Fifty-four tons of chains were used in lashing the timbers together, and the launching of the raft in the Bay of Fundy, Nova Scotia, Nov. 15, was heralded as the first move in a revolution of the method of lumber-shipping from the Canadian timber regions to this and neighboring ports.

The raft is composed of 30,000 pieces of timber, or enough to make cargoes for 100 vessels of 100 tons each. It is longer than the largest ocean steamer, draws more water, and is of about equal width.

It took six months to build it. The process of making the raft is patented by H. R. Robertson. The raft is worth $150,000 and is owned by James D. Leary, the ship-builder and lumberman. It was to have been brought up the Sound and anchored in Flushing Bay.

It was floated safely down the coast of Maine for about two hundred miles and there met by the steamship Miranda, which was to tow the monster the rest of the way. But in the gale of Saturday the big hawsers broke and the raft was abandoned.

To cast a six-foot log into New York Bay is a misdemeanor, but it is no legal offense to abandon a big raft at sea.

The mass of lumber would not ordinarily drift further than a mile an hour. Should a steamer strike it the result would be terrible. All the shipping and steamship companies having offices in New York have cabled to their European offices giving warning of the vagabond raft, but there are many vessels nearing this shore with precious freight to whose commanders the drifting timber pile is unknown, and much worry is consequent upon this fact.

How much concern is felt by shippers may be judged by the fact that the revenue cutter Grant and the war steamer Enterprise have joined with the powerful Morse in searching the ocean wilderness for the derelict mass of timber.

There are scores of visitors at the Ship News Office and the offices of Supt. Houghton, of the Maritime Exchange, and Lieut. Cottman, of the Hydrographic Office, anxiously inquiring for news of the floating reef. The Morse is 165 feet long, 51 feet beam

WHY SCHOOLBOYS WILL YELL.

Holiday from This Afternoon Till the Wednesday After New Year's.

When the good little boy gets home this afternoon he will put his school-books carefully away. The average boy is likely to arrive a little later and to throw his books into the most convenient corner with a hop, skip and jump, supplemented with a more or less subdued yell.

The present or approximate whereabouts of the raft is unknown, though the opinion prevails that it cannot have drifted very far from the place where she was last seen. The winds have been from a generally westerly direction since Saturday last, with but little variation. The raft may have been blown out into the Gulf Stream, and if that is so the timber is now on his way to Iceland.

More probably, however, and here lies the cause of the anxiety among shippers, the mass is still drifting in the pathway followed by the transatlantic steamers, and near enough to these shores to be dangerous also to coastwise craft.

Brooklyn News at a Glance.

J. W. Sipple, aged forty-two years, captain of the schooner Nathaniel East, lying at the foot of Pacific street, had both his legs fractured by being caught between a hawser and the side of his boat yesterday.

A canal-boat loaded with coal and belonging to the Delaware and Hudson Coal Company sank yesterday at the foot of Hamilton street.

Thomas L. Cavin, a truckman, while backing his horse and wagon to the bank of Gowanus Canal, at the foot of Douglas street, backed into the canal. Cavin was fished out, but his horse, which was valued at $350, was drowned.

James Gannon and Michael Lawrence, the young men who were arrested on Dec. 16 on suspicion of being implicated in a burglary on E. J. Frazer's liquor-saloon in Hamilton avenue, were honorably discharged yesterday by Justice Maesy, no evidence having been produced to show that they were in any way concerned in the affair.

William F. Daniels was arrested last evening on complaint of Henry Winter, who accuses him of being implicated with Frederick Stuenkel in passing worthless checks upon him on Dec. 14 to the amount of $64.

Philip C. Bishop, a canvasser, was arrested last night on a charge of passing counterfeit money. He is accused by W. Smith, a ferry-master employed on the Catherine street line, with giving him a counterfeit dollar in payment of his fare.

Louis Dahl, aged twenty-five years, was arrested last evening for striking Henry McDonald, a cold six years old, on the head with an iron hook, causing a severe wound. McDonald was standing on the corner of York and Pearl streets when the assault was committed. No provocation was given so far as is known.

Leona Koppermann, aged eighteen years, while on her way home from work on Wednesday evening, was knocked down on Crescent street, East New York, by an unknown man, who robbed her of her pocket-book. Before the girl could recover from the fright the man had fled.

Another Wrong Diagnosis.
(From the Omaha World.)
Omaha Girl to Boston Girl—Why, my dear, your lips are all catenated; that lump in the middle of your upper lip looks like a wart. I don't see why you Boston girls should make such goose of yourselves over such a new fad.

Melting Down Spanish Doubloons.

Supt. Mason, of the United States Assay Office, in Wall street, said to-day that the morning papers had made several mistakes in regard to the selection of a site for the monument to Mr. Beecher. Mr. Sage asserted that he and Mr. Beecher some years ago selected the site for the Sage memorial, and that it was the same site which the committee now has in view. A subcommittee was appointed to confer with Mr. Sage and Mrs. Beecher and her children concerning the matter.

At a meeting of the committee in charge of the memorial to Mr. Beecher last evening, a letter was read from Henry W. Sage, of Ithaca, saying that Mr. Sage could not unite with the committee in the selection of a site for the monument to Mr. Beecher. Mr. Sage asserted that he and Mr. Beecher some years ago selected the site for the Sage memorial, and that it was the same site which the committee now has in view.
